Consumer Critique: Necklace Saver

Whether you have a lot of necklaces or just a few, you know how annoying it can be when the chain gets tangled. There are ways to store it without it getting tangled - on a necklace tree, or in the original jewelry box, for example - but often these solutions take up extra space or aren't practical for travel. And if they're stored in individual jewelry boxes, then it's hard to remember which one has which necklace.

The Necklace Saver aims to solve all of those problems at once. It keeps necklaces from tangling, takes up very little space, and is easy to see which necklace is which. It's incredible easy to use - just slide the necklace in, then circle and tie the ends of the fabric. It comes in a few sizes and lengths, so you'll likely be able to find one for most of the necklaces you have. Right now you can buy it only at Beads of Westchester in New York or online at Bead City NY.

I will definitely use mine for travel. I love that it will be very easy to slip into a bag without taking up a lot of space. I don't have a lot of necklaces, so storage space at home isn't a problem, but even just getting one or two for when you go on vacation is a good idea. Plus, a portion of the proceeds are donated to orphanages, so you're supporting a good cause when you purchase the product.
